Hi, I found your article about Joseph Henelt. He lived with my father and my grandparents in Stanmore North London during the war. My dad says he was evacuated from Narvik to England and had pneumonia at the time. My father remembers going with him to his studio in St John's Wood close to Regents Park in London. He shared a birthday with my dad's sister, he left England for America and his work was with General Motors in Chicago. He kept in touch with my grandparents for many years.
